Jeremy Creelan Joins the Rockefeller Institute of Government as a Visiting Fellow

Albany, NY—Jeremy M. Creelan, a government reform expert, has been named a visiting fellow of the Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute of Government where he will focus on reform and social justice issues.

Creelan is currently a partner at the law firm Jenner & Block, where he focuses on complex commercial litigation and government controversies and public policy litigation practices. In 2014, he was appointed by Governor Andrew M. Cuomo as co-chair of the Commission on Youth, Public Safety & Justice. In that role, he was tasked with developing recommendations and plans to raise the age of criminal responsibility in New York State and implementing additional reforms to the juvenile justice system.

Prior to rejoining Jenner & Block, he served as special counsel for public integrity and ethics reform and then as special counsel to Governor Cuomo, as well as deputy director of the democracy program at the Brennan Center for Justice at New York University School of Law.

Creelan has authored significant reform legislation for the State of New York, prosecuted numerous voting rights cases and co-authored a landmark, comprehensive study of New York State's legislative process.

In addition, Creelan has served as an adjunct professor at the NYU School of Law from 2005 to 2007, where he taught election law. He is a graduate of Yale College and Yale Law School.

"We are thrilled to have Jeremy joining our team here at the Rockefeller Institute as a visiting fellow," said Jim Malatras, president of the Rockefeller Institute of Government. "His broad career as a policymaker, litigator, and advocate will be invaluable to drive evidence-based policymaking, especially in government reform and social justice," Malatras said.

As a visiting fellow, Creelan will remain with Jenner & Block.
